WHEN: Friday, August 26, 2011

As play therapists we are faced with challenging cases involving children who present difficult behavioral problems. The latest neurological research and treatment approaches require that we understand the developmental issues for these behaviors and have a solidly built play therapy plan to meet the needs of the children and families who come for services. This workshop is focused on developing an understanding of the attachment and neurological development issues and providing information on play therapy techniques to use in treatment.

Participants will:

1. Gain understanding of neurosequential development and application to play behaviors
2. Gain understanding of attachment issues and considerations for useable play therapy techniques
3. View video footage of applications of play therapy for various presenting issues of attachment and neurosequential development.
4. Have opportunity to discuss play therapy practices that have been helpful and ask questions for treatment that has not worked so well.
