Global Reader Secures Licensing Deal with Macmillan US and UK

TORONTO--- MPS Mobile's Global Reader, a worldwide mobile content distribution service, today announced a major content licensing deal with Macmillan's US and UK publishing operations. The new partnership will soon bring thousands of book titles onto the Global Reader service.

Global Reader will immediately gain access to books from Macmillan's leading US imprints including Farrar, Strauss & Giroux, Henry Holt, St. Martin's Press, Tor, Picador, Macmillan Audio, and Quick and Dirty Tips. "We are very eager to support innovative, exciting initiatives such as Global Reader," said Fritz Foy SVP Strategic Technology for Macmillan US. "In all, we are going to post over 3,000 titles on Global Reader's mobile content service."

The deal also extends to Macmillan Ltd. who will submit titles from all its UK trade imprints from Pan through Picador, Macmillan Children's Books and Boxtree. "I am delighted that Macmillan Ltd. has been able to participate in this deal. While the mobile content market is a nascent one here right now, it is growing rapidly elsewhere and it is an area in which we are keen to experiment in and learn from." says Sara Lloyd Head of Digital Publishing Pan Macmillan UK.

"We are pleased to see such strong lists coming onto the Global Reader service," says Director of Sales Bob Kasher. "We hope to see other major publishers joining Macmillan, O'Reilly, E-reads, and our many other content partners in days to come. We want to present as much of the world's print, audio and video product as possible to mobile consumers in the US and around the world."

The announced deal also covers audio book content from Macmillan Audio, taking advantage of the newly enhanced WAP-site's capability to handle print, audio and video products. "A consumer can now access both audio and print versions of the same book on their mobile device if it's capable of playing audio," says Jim Link Manager of Technology at MPS Mobile.

Books will be priced the same as they are in other digital formats. Consumers will have the added option of purchasing individual chapters for .99 each. "The ability to buy individual chapters allows consumers a low cost method of dipping into a book to see if they want to buy it, or to supplement a purchase they've already made of the print or e-book by accessing a specific chapter on their mobile device for their convenience," says Kasher. "Our platform has the flexibility to give publishers these additional options for making their content available to the public."

The deal also demonstrates Global Reader's ability to extend mobile distribution worldwide by handling rights from a variety of international publishing divisions. Global Reader has the capability to tailor distribution based on rights availability or other considerations, turning markets on and off as needed. "We can deliver books to all markets, or only to the markets publishers have rights for," said Kasher.
