

News of a performance:

Schwer wie Ein-stein

A duet of Jungyeon Kim and Anastasia Kostner

It has been more than one year since we started to develop this duet. Our departure point was simple; dropping the head to initiate movement and to interact with each other. We were laughing a lot during rehearsals, because the weight of the head was such an absolute physical reality that always challenged and surprised us.

We first performed this piece in the Frankfurt University of Music and Performing Arts in 2010. We also performed the piece for children in schools under the frame of the art education program 'Erlebnis Musik'.

“A movement research gave birth to this piece; research into the weight of the body, particularly the head. We were interested in the chain of movement that arises, once we let the weight of the head guide the rest of the body to move. The meanings came later; the interdependency between individuals, waiting and expectations, humor and play. We invite viewers to understand the logic of our bodily dialogue, to witness our decision-making, and to be surprised with what the body tells about our existence.”
