

Lotus Center for Integrative Medicine
Practitioner Bios

Rena Haley, MSOM, LAc is a clinician at the Lotus Center for Integrative Medicine with almost ten years of training in complementary medicine, acupuncture, herbal medicine, nutrition and homeopathy. She received her bachelor's degree in holistic health from the American University of Complementary Medicine and her Master's of Science Degree in Oriental Medicine from Samra University.

Brandon Horn, PhD, JD, LAc, FABORM is a lecturer, researcher and clinician in the fields of acupuncture, herbal medicine and nutrition. He practices at the Lotus Center for Integrative Medicine, PC, with his wife, Wendy Yu; is President of the American University of Complementary Medicine; and is a member of the faculty at UCLA Medical School and Children's Hospital Los Angeles.

Shino Kaneko, MD is an avid soccer player and heads the Lotus Center's primary care division. She incorporates acupuncture, herbal medicine and nutrition into her treatment recommendations, believing the integration of Eastern and Western methodologies is really just about practicing good medicine.

Stephanie Singleton, LMT has almost fifteen years experience as a licensed massage therapist. She treats stress-induced symptoms, sports injuries and discomforts resulting from pregnancy. She is also trained in fertility massage techniques and pregnancy/prenatal massage.

Andrea Thorpe, LAc, FABORM is a clinician, researcher and teacher in the fields of acupuncture and herbal medicine. She received her bachelor's degree in Chinese medicine from the London School of Acupuncture and Traditional Chinese Medicine and her master's degree from Yo San University. She has worked extensively in hospitals in both England and China and is currently pursuing her PhD in Classical Chinese Medicine.

Wendy Yu, MSOM, LAc, FABORM is a lecturer, researcher and clinician in the fields of acupuncture, herbal medicine, nutrition and functional medicine. She is also a practitioner at the Lotus Center for Integrative Medicine, PC, with her husband, Brandon Horn; founder of the Acupuncture Pain Management Program at Children's Hospital Los Angeles; and a member of the American Board of Oriental Reproductive Medicine.