

bee things winter 2013

no order is too big, too small, or too medium.

Calling all shops! We sell our products all over the world via wholesale and consignment, and we would love to work with you. Please take a look and let us know if you have any questions at all.

wholesale:

We prefer wholesale, only because it's easier for us to keep track of, and it's less work for shops and sites to monitor. Rates can be negotiable, depending on the size of your order. Time to ship is also dependent on the size of your order, but typically we have a good inventory on hand. Also, depending on the size of the order, shipping may be paid for in full by us, or we may ask that you split the cost. Orders outside the U.S. may need to pay import fees.

consignment:

We understand the need for some shops to operate on a consignment basis, and we're ready to work with you. Time to ship is dependent on the size of your order, but typically we have a good inventory on hand. Also, depending on the size of the order, shipping may be paid for in full by us, or we may ask that you split the cost. Sorry, we only make consignment arrangements with U.S. customers.

On request, especially for website shops, bee things is glad to set up a drop-ship arrangement. Ask us about drop-ship when you inquire about our products.

shay ometz and jeff barfoot are cofounders of bee things, where they make art prints and posters, apparel, and products for the home.

Jim Henson once said, "My hope still is to leave the world a bit better than when I got here." Shay and Jeff love to design, illustrate and print things that make them happy, and they hope to make the people out in the world that see them a bit happier, too.

The husband and wife team's mid-century modern home and their their work have been featured by Fab, HGTV Magazine, ReadyMade Magazine, The Dallas Morning News, D Home Magazine, The Working Proof, and on the popular blog design*sponge.

They have been making prints and home goods together as bee things since 2007. They have done design and illustration projects for AT&T, Crate and Barrel, Papyrus, The New York Times, Nickelodeon, Fossil, The Land of Nod, the National Audubon Society, Parragon Books, and Sappi Paper, among others.

Jeff and Shay live and work in Dallas, Texas, with their two moppy-haired sons and two mini weenie dogs, all four of which eat their food.
