NORTHWEST HEALTH FOUNDATION NAMES JASON HILTON AS VICE PRESIDENT OF FINANCE

Foundation taps Senior Vice President of Capital Pacific Bank for mission-related investment and finance expertise.

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Northwest Health Foundation named Jason Hilton as Vice President of Finance. He succeeds founding Vice President of Finance David Hooff following his retirement.

Hilton serves as Senior Vice President for Capital Pacific Bank where he most recently provides leadership and strategic support to their mission-related investment efforts.

“Northwest Health Foundation will use all of the tools in our toolbox, including mission-related investing, to advance health for Oregon & SW Washington” said Foundation president Nichole Maher. “Jason’s experience in this field, along with his skills in asset management and finance means we’ve landed the perfect person to lead this work.”

“I get to build on a legacy of innovative approaches to improving health,” said Hilton. “From grants to investment to free meeting space, this foundation is all hands on deck to meet its mission. I am excited to get started.”

Hilton’s first day is July 1, 2014.

Hilton grew up in the small town of Jacksonville, Oregon and attended South Medford High School. He received a Bachelor's of Science in Business and Finance with a minor in Economics from the University of Montana. He returned to Oregon, working for US Bancorp Securities then US Bank as a corporate credit analyst. In 1999 he joined a locally owned, $50MM financial services company where he rose to the position of Chief Operating Officer, helped facilitate its sale to a publically traded company and was then part of a business acquisition team.

In 2008 he joined Capital Pacific Bank as a Portfolio Manager and Client Relations Officer, rising to a Senior Vice President overseeing a team addressing troubled companies and bank-owned real estate. He then championed strategic and new business initiatives including leadership and strategic support to Capital Pacific's mission-related investment efforts. Outside of his career, Jason co-founded a local non-profit focused on aiding orphanages that rescue children from the sex trade. He enjoys volunteering at the Portland Rescue Mission, fly fishing, and sharing his love of Oregon's natural beauty with his two young daughters.

ABOUT DAVID HOOFF, RETIRING VICE PRESIDENT OF FINANCE
